Protecting Our Natural Environment

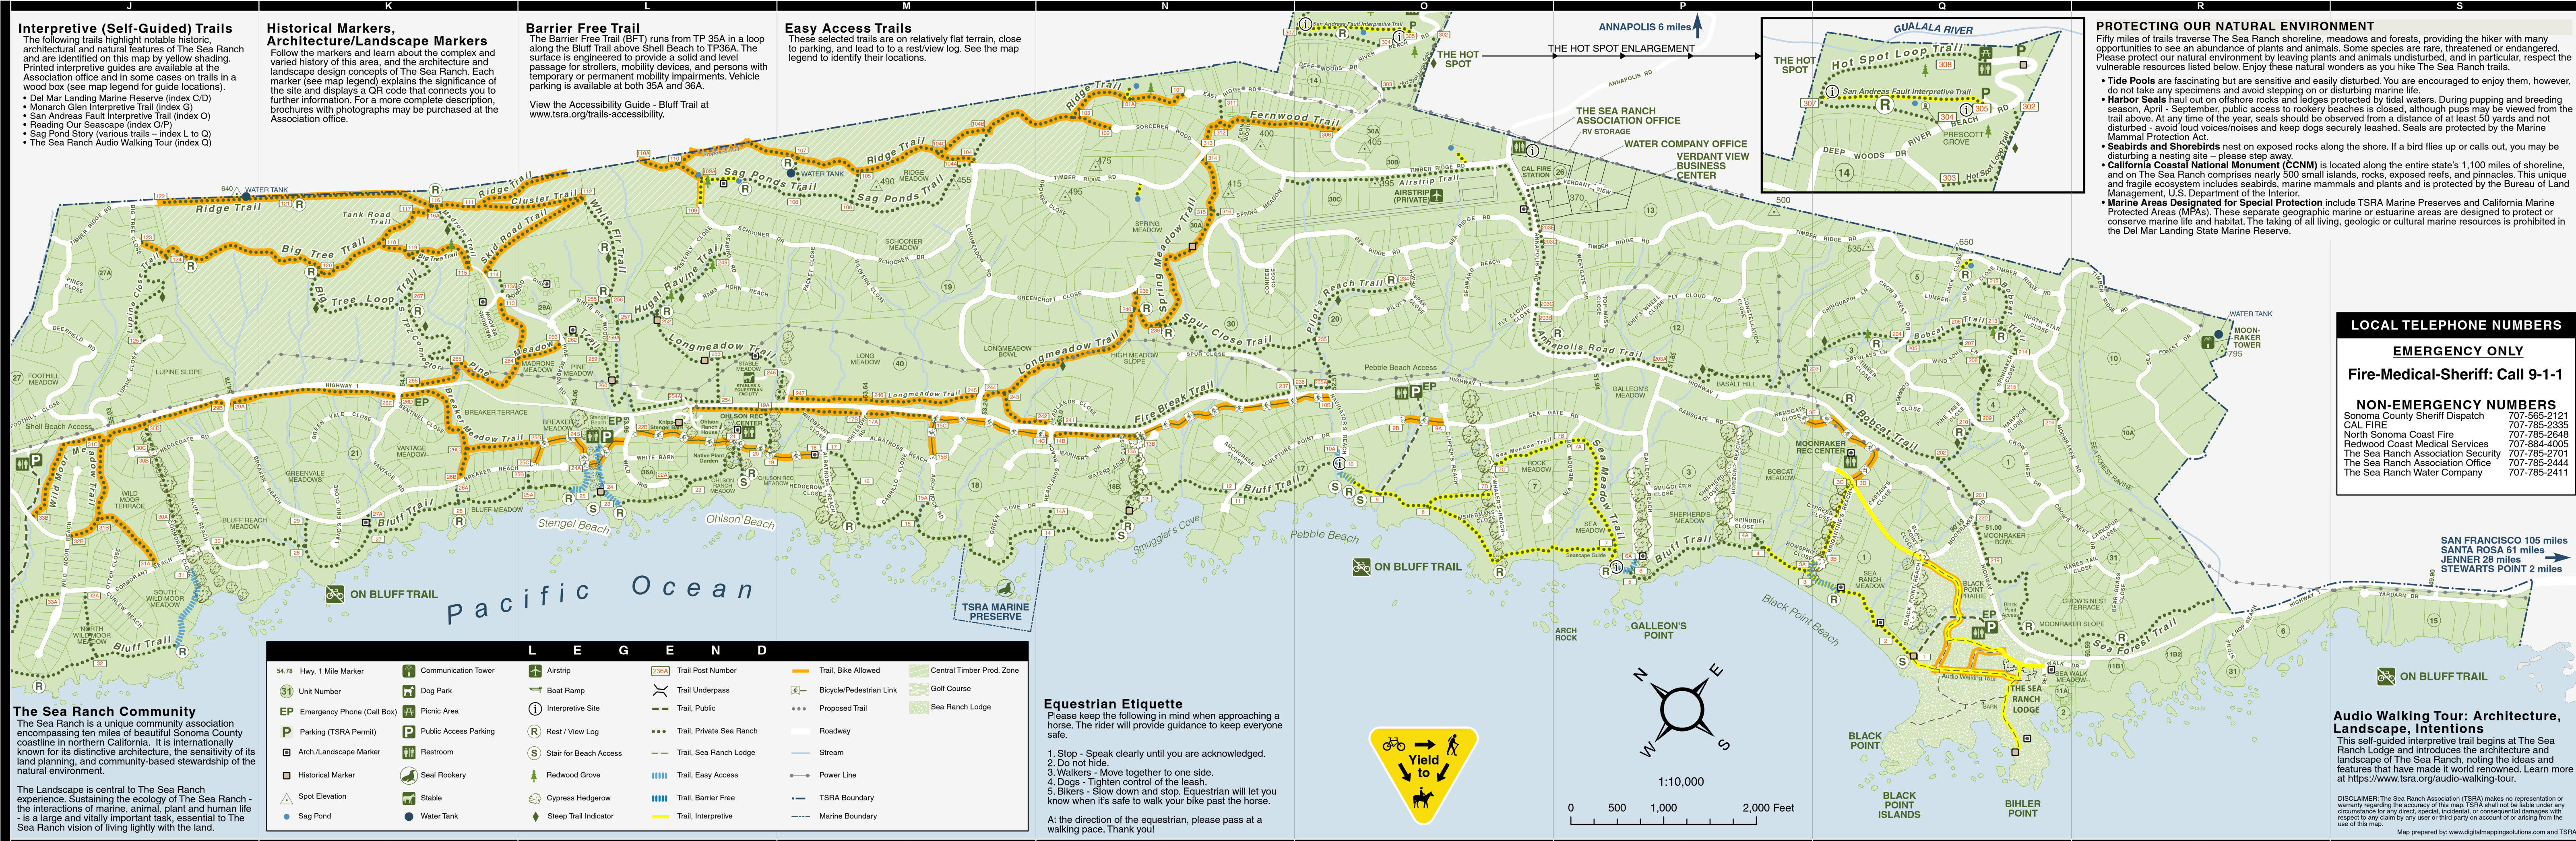

Fifty miles of trails traverse The Sea Ranch shoreline, meadows and forests, providing the hiker with many opportunities to see an abundance of plants and animals. Some species are rare, threatened or endangered. Please protect our natural environment by leaving plants and animals undisturbed, and in particular, respect the vulnerable resources listed below. Enjoy these natural wonders as you hike The Sea Ranch trails.

- Tide Pools are fascinating but are sensitive and easily disturbed. You are encouraged to enjoy them, however, do not take any specimens and avoid stepping on or disturbing marine life.
- Harbor Seals haul out on offshore rocks and ledges protected by tidal waters. During pupping and breeding season, April - September, public access to rookery beaches is closed, although pups may be viewed from the trail above. At any time of the year, seals should be observed from a distance of at least 50 yards and not disturbed - avoid loud voices/noises and keep dogs securely leashed. Seals are protected by the Marine Mammal Protection Act.
- Seabirds and Shorebirds nest on exposed rocks along the shore. If a bird flies up or calls out, you may be disturbing a nesting site - please step away.
- California Coastal National Monument (CCNM) is located along the entire state's 1,100 miles of shoreline, and on The Sea Ranch comprises nearly 500 small islands, rocks, exposed reefs, and pinnacles. This unique and fragile ecosystem includes seabirds, marine mammals and plants and is protected by the Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Department of the Interior.
- Marine Areas Designated for Special Protection include TSRA Marine Preserves and California Marine Protected Areas (MPAs). These separate geographic marine or estuarine areas are designed to protect or conserve marine life and habitat. The taking of all living, geologic or cultural marine resources is prohibited in the Del Mar Landing State Marine Reserve.

The Sea Ranch Community

The Sea Ranch is a unique community association encompassing ten miles of beautiful Sonoma County coastline in northern California. It is internationally known for its distinctive architecture, the sensitivity of its land planning, and community-based stewardship of the natural environment.

The Landscape is central to The Sea Ranch experience. Sustaining the ecology of The Sea Ranch - the interactions of marine, animal, plant and human life - is a large and vitally important task, essential to The Sea Ranch vision of living lightly with the land.

Equestrian Etiquette

Please keep the following in mind when approaching a horse. The rider will provide guidance to keep everyone safe.

- Stop - Speak clearly until you are acknowledged.
- Do not hide.
- Walkers - Move together to one side.
- Dogs - Tighten control of the leash.
